The Spirit of Ayurveda
10 x TIMES AWARDED AS “THE BEST AYURVEDIC CENTRE”
The ancient teachings of Ayurveda are undoubtedly among the most important ingredients of Indian culture.
They form the cornerstone of Somatheeram, the first resort to have made Ayurvedic teachings well-known beyond India’s borders. Its aspiration was to provide Ayurveda, yoga and meditation in a peaceful and captivating setting.
Somatheeram is an Ayurvedic centre that adopted a holistic approach and at the same time reflected India’s culture and beauty.

Somatheeram is situated on the picturesque Malabar Coast in the southern Indian state of Kerala. The location is just 30 minutes or 21 kilometres from Trivandrum (Thiruvananthapuram) International Airport. The resort itself is situated right by the sea – far removed from mass tourism, in the peaceful neighbourhood of the village of Chowara.

Kerala is close to the equator, so the climate is pleasant all year round. The months from June to October, the Monsoon period, is highly recommended for Ayurvedic treatments. The months from November to February are regarded as the high season because of their temperate climate.

Simply the best

Somatheeram is the undisputed No. 1 amongst all Ayurveda Resorts. So far it has been awarded ten times by the Department of Tourism as “The Best Ayurvedic Centre”.

With this government certified appreciation of its services and quality, it spearheads all other resorts which offer Ayurvedic services.

Somatheeram also holds other seals of quality as the “Green Leave Certification” by the Government of Kerala.
Ayurveda is a philosophy of life concerned with the preservation of a healthy life-style. It arose about 5,000 years ago in India and is considered the world’s oldest documented system of medicine. The earliest written records go back 3,000 years.

The term “Ayurveda” has its origin in Sanskrit. “Ayus” means life or life-span; “veda” means knowledge or also science. The composite term Ayurveda therefore means not just “knowledge of life”, but embodies an aspiration to live one’s life in the best-possible state, physically and mentally. The Ayurvedic philosophy aims towards a long and above all healthy life in the sense of a balanced style of living – based on the three pillars of body, mind and soul. The emphasis here is not only on the treatment of disease, but also on prevention through purification and revitalisation.

“A person is deemed healthy when their physiognomy is balanced, their digestion and metabolism are in good working order, their tissue and excretory functions are normal and their soul, mind and senses are in a state of constant inner happiness.”

Sushruta, Ayurvedic doctor, 1000 BC
The person is seen as a unity of body, mind and soul – and any course of treatment must therefore be geared to the patient’s individual needs. Any course of treatment therefore starts with an initial examination by the doctor in charge. This includes not only recording the case history and the current living habits, but also a pulse diagnosis and a physical check-up. In this connection, deciding on the Dosha typ according to the Ayurvedic Tridosha model plays a very important part. Doshas exist in every person in his or her own personal mix from birth. They should always be in harmony with each other – even if their relative strengths can shift in the course of a lifetime.

The right balance of the Doshas is essential for physical and mental health. An unhealthy and unbalanced life-style or changes in the person’s circumstances cause a shift in the natural balance. In Ayurvedic teachings this disturbance of the equilibrium is seen as the cause of disease. The goal of any Panchakarma treatment is the restoration of this balance. The elementary features of any course of treatment are oil massages and various herbal and purification treatments as well as yoga and meditation. The precise treatment programme has to be drawn up individually for each guest. The same applies to the Ayurvedic diet plan. Depending on the Dosha constitution, the same spice or ingredient affects the balance of the Doshas in different ways.
Package offers

Based on our experience, we have put together various Panchakarma packages as selected treatment regimes.

The package price covers the cost of accommodation, treatment, yoga, meditation, Ayurvedic full board and other services such as transfer to and from the airport.

Should your state of health call for further treatment, the doctors will discuss this with you and notify you of the cost.

Please find details in our Tariff Booklet.

Treatments

Sirodhara, Sirovasthi or Kizhi may be known but Somatheeram offers over 30 different kinds of Ayurvedic treatments. After your first consultation our doctors will decide which kind of single treatments are the most efficient for your constitution.
Yoga alleviates mental stress and encourages relaxation and inner peace. Furthermore, yoga can also be therapeutic – both as a remedy and as a prophylactic. In the Ayurvedic teachings, yoga and meditation are an essential part of any programme of treatment to establish a balance between the Doshas. In all but a few cases, yoga and meditation practice are integral parts of the daily schedule.

Whether you are a beginner or an advanced participant, the extensive experience of our yoga teachers is sure to deepen your knowledge and skills.

Somatheeram offers different timings for beginner and advanced participant courses. Daily group courses are included in the different Ayurveda Packages. Single lessons can be booked extra.
Diet

The right diet is a key to a healthy and fulfilled life – and all the more so during a stay in Somatheeram. If you want to improve your health, lose weight or purify the system, you should resort to Ayurvedic cuisine attuned to your particular constitution.

Integral to each course of Ayurvedic treatment is the appropriate diet. During the initial examination, the Somatheeram doctors compile a personal Ayurvedic diet plan for each guest – in accordance with his/her personal Dosha or constitution. Various types of fruit, freshly pressed juices, exotic spices – all these promise a varied and tasty nutritional regime. Of course, the cuisine also includes non-Ayurvedic dishes from Europe and China.

Ayurvedic Diet

An Ayurvedic meal thrives on the art of composition. The various ingredients are skilfully combined in terms of flavour, colour, consistency and preparation method. The food has a pleasant aroma, stimulates the appetite and contains all six rasas or tastes in carefully measured quantities. An Ayurvedic meal is above all else balanced and in every respect wholesome. For it contains all the ingredients necessary for health: proteins, carbohydrates, fats, vitamins, minerals and trace elements. The preparation method and the combination of foods make the meal particularly agreeable and easy to digest. Roughly 200 different Ayurvedic dishes are available.
Rooms

The building style is traditional South Indian, while the standard of furnishings and hygiene is decidedly European. All the rooms are appointed with a shower, toilet, fans, mosquito nets, and telephone. Depending on the exact position of the accommodation, the beach is merely 1 to 5 minutes away.

Sidharta Deluxe
Sidharta is a villa with a spacious living room and bedroom. As a deluxe suite with its own terrace, it affords an unparalleled panoramic view of the sea. Its special attraction is a bathroom beneath the open sky.
Cottages
These bungalows built of natural stone or brick in the typical southern Indian style are mainly designed as double rooms. Each consists of a bedroom and bathroom. The Special/Seaview bungalows are more spacious, detached and offer a view of the sea from the interior or from the terrace.

Kerala-houses
The Kerala houses were the traditional homes of southern India’s aristocracy in former times. The houses are up to 300 years old and were rebuilt after elaborate restoration. Distinctive features are the timber construction method and the use of antique doors and furniture.
In the standard category, the guest has a bedroom and bathroom. The deluxe units are more spacious and some have a separate living room.
